He pointed to the knotted hills.He told Birch that he had received a sending from his teacher on Roke, the Master Hand, and must go at once, on what business he could not say, of course, but it should not take long once he was there; a half-month to go, another to return; he would be back well before the Fallows at the latest. He must ask Master Birch to provide him an advance on his salary to pay for ship-passage and lodging, for a wizard of Roke should not take advantage of people's willingness to give him whatever he needed, but pay his way like an ordinary man. As Birch agreed with this, he had to give Ivory a purse for his journey. It was the first real money he had had in his pocket for years: ten ivory counters carved with the Otter of Shelieth on one side and the Rune of Peace on the other in honour of King Lebannen. "Hello, little namesakes," he told them when he was alone with them. "You and the cheese money will get along nicely." Medra did not answer at once. "Chance," he said at last, "favoring long desire. Not art. Not." "My place," she said, slowly, the words dragging, "my place is on the hill. Where things are what they are. Tell the dead man I will meet him there." "He's not too well," she said, speaking low. "He was curing the cattle away out east over the marsh, in the cold, for days on end, and wore himself out." "say it. And the rest is silence." "But power - like you told me about - that isn't the same as making people do what you want, or." "It's never enough," Mead said. "And what can anyone do alone?" "likely to be sung again. There old men at the tavern talk of Morred as if they had known him when. sound of thunder was still in his mind, the vibration of thunder was in his bones, in his feet. At that, the witch stopped walking. She hissed like a cat. "Tell anyone?" That's all he really told me, yet," said Dragonfly, coming back to the mild, overcast spring day. In there he knew he should hurry, that the bones of the earth ached to move, and that he must. It was far more convenient to him that Losen should be king than that he himself should rule Havnor openly. Men of arms didn't trust men of craft and didn't like to serve them. No matter what a mage's powers, unless he was as mighty as the Enemy of Morred, he couldn't hold armies and fleets together if the soldiers and sailors chose not to obey. People were in the habit of fearing and obeying Losen, an old habit now, and well learned. They credited him with the powers he had had of bold strategy, firm leadership, and utter cruelty; and they credited him with powers he had never had, such as mastery over the wizards who served him. Morred and Elfarran. In the third year of his reign, the young king went south to the largest. Very few people ever spoke to Gelluk unless he compelled them to. The spells by which he silenced, or another he came at last to Geath in the Ninety Isles. in spells of protection, endurance, peace. They saw the Rule of Roke established, though never so. fountain, perhaps because it was pleasant to come across something even a little familiar. But I screamed as green wood screams in the fire. Though like any power they could be perverted to evil use in the service of ambition (as was the Terrenon Stone in Osskil), the Old Powers were inherently sacral and pre-ethical. During and after the Dark Time, however, they were feminised and demonised in the Hardic lands by wizards, as they were in the Kargad Lands by the cults of the Priestkings and the Godkings. So by the eighth century, in the Inner Lands of the Archipelago, only village women kept up rituals and offerings at the old sites. They were despised or abused for doing so. Wizards kept clear of such places. On Roke, itself the center of the Old Powers in all Earthsea, the profoundest manifestations of those powers-Roke Knoll and the Immanent Grove-were never spoken of as such. Only the Patterners, who lived all their lives in the Grove, served to link human arts and acts to the older sacredness of the earth, reminding the wizards and mages that their power was not theirs, but lent to them. watched something just out of sight, around the corner, elsewhere. spared him he would tell them all about the Hand, and Roke, and the great mages of Roke. cobbled, he heard voices. The conversation had trailed off somehow. It seemed to me that the girl was beginning to. After a long time, late in the afternoon, old Hound came trudging up the valley. He stopped now and then and sniffed. He sat down on the hillside beside the scar in the ground, resting his tired legs. He studied the ground where some crumbs of fresh dirt lay and the grass was bent. He stroked the bent grass to straighten it. He got to his feet at last, went for a drink of the clear brown water under the willows, and set off down the valley towards the mine.
